Dear Casey,

Thanks for your comments and your encouragement. Sorry I am so slow to respond, but they did get here in time. I'm not sure I used every comment, but I did make a number of changes in response to your notes and your interview. Mainly, however, I am thrilled that you liked the manuscript. Your gut response has to be one of the most important tests I could put it to.

This letter also has another purpose. As I probably wrote you, after talking to you last summer I received a copy of the mysterious memo which you wrote in 1964 for the Waveland conference. I want to reprint it along with an article (a condensed version of the book) in a book on women's history to be published by Houghton Mifflin. You own the common law copyright to that document as the author of it. So they have asked me to request your permission to reprint it. Just sign the enclosed statement and send it in the envelope if it is OK with you.

Stay in touch. I may decide to put the memo in an appendix in my book, too. If so, I'll probably be writing again soon with a similar document.

Warmly,

Sara

Sara Evans

P.S. I enclose a copy of the memo both for proper identification and because I'm sure you will enjoy reading it again. You remembered it well - it's a spunky document.
