

June 21, 1978

Sara Evans
History Department
University of Minnesota
Minneapolis, Minnesota

Dear Sara:

It certainly is interesting to actually read this document you sent. I can't honestly say I remember writing all this. Especially, the initial documentation section contains many instances of discrimination against women in the movement which I do not remember having compiled from my own experience.

I'm enclosing a note I am sending to some women I was close to at that time and perhaps we can get a clearer picture. I think May King at least will have some light to shed on this when she reads the paper.

I don't want to sign this release until I get some feedback but I think it could simply be printed as an anonymous piece attributed to me if they need to go ahead. I have no objections at all to it's being used, but I don't want to claim I wrote it if it was a group or joint effort, which seems likely to me now that I have read it over. But I could just be forgetting how my own head worked at the time. Many of us seem to have some difficulties with this; it was such a time.

Maybe a copy of this letter to the publishers will allow them to proceed. Please advise.

Best regards,

Casey
Casey Cason

cc: women to whom note is addressed